Back to normal, back to business.

Information security breaches can occur anytime, anywhere, demanding the immediate attention of forensic security professionals. When this sort of disaster strikes, organizations are often unprepared to respond. Critical time is lost finding professional resources and arranging business relationships – this often takes days while sensitive data is being stolen and tracks are being erased. It is common to lose most of the intellectual and business capital after a breach is discovered but before a coordinated response can be arranged.

For this reason N2NetSecurity, Inc. has created an innovative Managed Forensic Security Service. This service provides your organization instant access to experienced forensic security engineers who respond, perform an initial assessment of the situation and guide you through the entire process until the incident is resolved and you are back to normal, back to business. Within 4 hours, we will provide online support and begin to collect data about the incident. Next, as appropriate, we will provide onsite incident response and forensic services. Once the situation is contained, we will assist in securing the systems and hardening against further attack. As required, we will assist with increased monitoring to ensure the steps taken were effective. Finally, a detailed report of the incident will be provided along with recommendations to prevent future incidents.

In order to support companies with varying response requirements and budget constraints, for a limited time, N2NetSecurity, Inc. is offering the following flexible payment options:
